Shoshones and Arapahoes Some General Western News. A Stockton, Cal., genius has produced what promises to be of as much importance to the mining world as the Bessemer process was to the iron trade. The inventor is J. R. Moffitt. He claims to have perfected a perfectly feasible and practicable method of working the most refractory and rebellious ores found in the Sierra Nevada. If this be true, says the San Francisco Chroniele, the discovery adds untold millions to the value of the mining properties in this state. As mining men and prospectors all know, there are hundreds upon hundreds of mines and claims unworked today, although rich in precious metals, because there has been no known process by which the gold could be economically taken from the quartz. In many of these mines assays have shown that the ores run even as high as $100 a ton, and yet the properties have been abandoned. There were ways to get out the gold, but they were laboratory methods, and dear experience proved that in using them at the mines it cost more to free the metal than the gold was worth when concentrated into bullion. It is claimed for this process by those who have seen it applied that it will work at a profit the most refractory ores, even though they run not more than $3 to the

Marbles Trouble Brewing Between the

Abandons the Stamp Mill.

Moffitt's machine is so totally unlike any-Mofitt's machine is so totally unlike anything heretofore made for working ores that no one would take it to be what it is. The stamp mill is done away with altogether. The ore, broken into pieces as large as walnuts, runs into a crushing machine, in which rough steel plates rub against one another. The ore comes out in particles like river sand. Miners understand that these rebellious ores contain ordinarily no free gold whatever. One can look at this sand as it comes out of Mofitt's look at this sand as it comes out of Moffitt's crusher without seeing the glitter of gold or anything to indicate that there is a bit of the yellow metal in it. The gold is held in combinations, and such combinations that only the most costly chemical processes have heretofore been able to separate them. This sand-like ore is fed into the "oxidizing" machine, the most important part of Moffitt's

Externally this "oxidizing" machine looks not unlike a boiler with some cog-wheels at one end, a pipe at the other and a firehole underneath. A pressure blower is connected with it. Internally the machine is quite complicated. Within the outer casing there are two cylinders, one revolving within the other. They revolve in the same direction, but the inner one much faster than the other. Wood is fed into the firehole and burns such a manner under pressure that it be-such a manner under pressure that it be-comes charcoal before being finally consumed and so gives out an intense heat. This fire brings the outer cylinder to a white heat. The crushed ore is fed into this cylinder, and is, of course, heated with it.

Fine Points of the Process. Here the inner cylinder gets in its work. It has scores and scores of blow-pipes upon its surface, and air is forced through them at a tremendous rate by the pressure blower which connects with the interior of the which connects with the interior of the cylinder. As the outer heated cylinder slowly revolves the ore drops on the blow-pipes and thus gets the full benefit of the blast. So much oxygen is furnished that everything in the ore but the precious metais and a soft, powdery ash is burned in this cyclone motion.

The force of the blast is such that the lighter particles of metal and ash are forced upward and precipitated in a tank of water above the revolving cylinders. The heavier particles are blown downward and forced into another tank of water. Nothing is lost. If what is left of the ore at this time is examined the ash will be found to be glisten-ing with bits of gold, the metal having been released from the rebellious combinations which held it.

The process does not stop here. A spiral keeps gathering up the sediment in the tanks and mixing it with quicksilver into an amalgam, ready for the retort. Thus the ore is put into the machine in chunks and comes out amalgamated.

It Works Rapidly. Tests have shown that one of these ma-chines will treat a ton and a half of refrac-tory ore an hour, while larger machines of the same pattern will have a correspondingly greater capacity. A plant of them could be run for comparatively little money, as one good engine would furnish power for a num-ber of the machines and pressure blowers, the only other expenses being attendance and the wood or coal—wood preferred—used in the oxidizing furnace. Another advantage is that the machines weigh less than a ton and can be taken apart, no part weighing over 300 pounds. Therefore they can be easily transported over any mountain trail that a mule can traverse.

The ore at the Reeve mine at West Point,

Calaveras county, is said to be the most refractory known in California. A ten-stamp mill with a chlorination plant was tried at the mine, but it could not earn expenses. Experts who have seen Mofflit's machine work say it chews up the ore at the rate of a ton and a half an thour and turns out $25 in gold for every ten.

The discovery has already created quite a flurry in adjacent mining counties, and, in fact, wherever the particulars are known. The old man declares that he is not selling rights or territory or any part of his patent. When Moflitt was asked where he got his idea he referred to the story of the gold that disappeared from the mint. He said that $24,000 in gold was once missed from the San Francisco mint. No one knew where it had gone, but finally somebody thought of gathering up the soot on the buildings around. The soot was treated and $16,000 of the gold was recovered. Moffitt says he thought that would be a good way to smelt ore, and so tried it in his machine

MARBLES AND ONYX. Valuable Quarries of Both Discovered and Worked in Utah. Within a comparatively short period there has been developed in Utah, and at several points therein, very considerable deposits of singularly fine variegated marbles, and also superior qualities of the onyx-marbles. While most excellent qualities of white and blue marbles have been for a long time known to exist, the unusually beautiful samples recently displayed at the rooms of the Polytechnic society, says the Salt Lake Tribune, have created a decided interest in what now bids fair to become a valuable article of export and for home use

The character of the Utah onyx is identi-cal with that from Mexico found in the state of Puebio alone, where there are now nine establishments solely engaged in manu-facturing ornaments of exceeding beauty from this material.
Since the Mexican Southern railroad from Pueblo to Tecomavaca was opened not less than 1,000 tons of onyx have passed over it. The onyx of Mexico, like some of that of

Utah, resembles amber in appearance, but those of Utah have a vastly greater diversity of colorations and can be had in slabs of considerable size, so that they can enter into the decoration of interior walls in many ways not yet adopted and at a cost vastly less than The quarries at present opened in Utah exist near Logan in Cache county, at Pelican Point, and another on the west side of Utah lake, while still another is found on the east side of this lake adjacent to the town of Springville. From all of these have been taken a most extraordinary variety of marbles and onyx of unusual beauty and all susceptible of receiving the highest degree of polish.

The vein of the mine near Logan is nearly perpendicular and is being worked in from the outcrop on the line of the strike by means of a tunnel.

Those on the west side of Utah lake have a dip of some sixty degrees from the horizontal and are being worked on quarry face so that large pieces may be taken out, while

About the Shoshone Reservation. The second commission appointed to treat with the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians for a reduction of the reservation is not meeting with flattering success. Reports from Lander, Wyo., indidate that the negotlations have come to a standstill because the Indians decline to negotiate. They are sore because the terms agreed upon with the first commission a year ago were not acceptable at Washington. The Arapahoes now say that they will cede no land, and the Shoshones say they have no land to cede. The latter were placed, on the Shoshone reservation only by permission of Chief Washakle.
They were to be removed as soon as a reservation could be procured for them. Now the secretary of the interior proposes to recommend the ognize the Arapahoes as joint owners, and the Arapahoes seem determined to push their claims for a separate reservation.

Happenings in the West.

The Great Northern built 556 miles of road last year. Dillon, Mont., offers pinety acres of land and $10,000 to secure the state normal school. Ninety thousand acres of producing land in the Sacramento valley is covered with water. A peanutter in Great Falls, Mont., quit the business on receiving a legacy of 50,000 fraties. A stone finger was found in Idaho fifteen feet below the surface. The finder is looking for more. Five fingers are about his size. The opal fields of Idaho should not be comfounded with the diamond fields. The

The land profitable to turn to agriculture. The land must be artificially irrigated, but there is an abundance of water which can be utilized. It is said that the state can sustain a large agricultural population. An estimate of the amount of timber tributary to the Skarit river in Washington places it at 1,600,000,000 feet. Obstructions in the channel have caused the business along that stream to dwindle very much for several years. Now the river is to be cleared out, and 50,000,000 feet will be taken out from that section during the coming year. To show how exorbitant freight rates operate against California commerce, the San-Francisco Examiner instances the shipment of sevenly-five tons of merchandise from Omaha consigned to a San Francisco merchant: "It went by rail to New York, where it was taken on board a vessel and carried around Cape Horn to this port. The distance is just 17,000 miles, and yet the freight rate, after allowing for interest and reinsurance, was so low that the importer was enabled to make this tedious, roundabout trip and save mency, which he did in preference to shipping overland."

Growth and Prosperity.

The wonderful growth of Galveston, and The wonderful growth of Galveston, and especially that portion known as North Galveston, during the past few years has been due not only to local improvements and the natural result of rapid settlement and capital liberally invested, but also to the rapid growth of manufacturing industries which here find an unusually profitable field. Thus we find a combination of conditions for continual growth that is unsurpassed in any tinual growth that is unsurpassed in any other portion of the country, namely, a genial and healthful climate, an industrial growth capable of supporting a large population and agricultural attractions that cannot be excelled. The opportunities are just as good at the present time for making money, either in city property or small fruit farms. The latter class of farming always results in large profits to those who have been fortunate enough to invest. The property of the North Galveston asso-ciation cannot be otherwise regarded than as offering splendid inducements alike to home-seeker and investor. The fullest investigation of this property is cordially invited. The association is represented by Franklin F. Williams, Omaha, Neb., who will be happy to furnish all information desired. The address of the general office is: The North Galveston Ass'n, Box 963, Minneapolis, Minn.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. General Smith Succeeds Justice Bradley-

Mr. Berlin's Retirement. The old Board of County Commissioners adjourned for all time to come at last night's meeting. Very little business was transacted.

Justice Bradley's resignation was accepted and General George S. Smith appointed to succeed him. The official bonds of C. W. King and Daniel C. Daly were approved. After the routine business was disposed of Judge Sternberg rose and said that the board should extend its thanks to the retiring chairman, R. S. Berlin for his uniformly fair rulings and courtesy while presiding over the delib-erations of the commissioners. He spoke highly of Chairman Berlin's manly qualities, declaring that as chairman, he tional dignity to the board. In in the name of the county officers and en ployes at the court house, he presented Chairman Berlin with a fine, open-faced gold watch, engraved with the name of the chairman and date of presentation

both surprised and gratified.
"I have tried to do what was right," he said, "and I am glad that you think so well of my efforts."
He had always believed he had many friends in the court house, and the presenta-tion of the watch was to him additional evi-dence of the fact. Mr. Berlin referred to the harmony that had existed among the members of the board, but said that until the existing county code is changed the labors of the Douglas county commissioners will never be wholly satisfactory. The charter, he said, is amended every two years, everything being touched except the law governing counties. Douglas county, he thought, had outgrown the old code, and the laws should be altered to meet the needs of the new conditions. As to the watch, he said that it was just what he wanted.
